

processing means operating in some fashion on signal to extract some useful information, such as spectrum analysis to determine the various frequency components of a signal and filtering the signal to extract the required frequency component of the signal.

Digitized means the processing is done with a digital computer or special purpose digital hardware.

Digital Signal Processing (DSP) is concerned with numerical manipulation of signals and data in sampled form.